Treasures from our Tradition

We are faced with strong and disturbing readings today that hold a certain fascination, since they seem at first glance to be blueprints for future inevitable wars and hardship. A fundamentalist interpretation focuses on this aspect. Yet we hear them at our Sunday celebration of the Eucharist, which infuses them with hope and optimism. Rather than dreading the future, today's liturgy assures us that God is with us in all of life's inevitable trials, and that we have a role in shaping the outcome of human history. Occasionally, some Christians have attempted to decode these readings for an exact measure of the world's end, but they have thus far been disappointed.

"Nothing lasts forever" is a lyric from a Broadway show. Stars fall from the sky, leaves wither and fall, mountains wash into the sea, human projects and governments totter and collapse with great regularity. Today's liturgy opposes this idea as incomplete, reminding us that Christ has made a permanent change in human history, and that life in him is life forever. Rather than inviting us to throw in the towel, today's liturgy strengthens us for acts of goodness and grace in our families, communities, and world. -James Field, Copyright © J. S. Paluch Co.

Marriage Minute

When we face serious suffering, the hardest part is often dealing with the unpleasant surprise. We grieve not only the difficulty at hand, but the way that we wish things had turned out instead. In this weekend's readings, Jesus is warning us that trials will come, but we do not need to be afraid because he will not leave us. When we took our vows on our wedding day, our promises mirrored those of Jesus:

- ◆ After your serious diagnosis, I will take care of you.
- ◆ When our savings is almost gone and you haven't found a job yet, we will work it out together.
- ◆ When you bury your parents, I will weep with you.

We can be sure that trials will come, but they are less scary with the one we love at our side. Fortify your marriage at www.JoyfulMarriageProject.com
